

War of 1812 Battles, Skirmishes, Raids, Massacres, Occupations, and Invasions

Numbers in brackets refer to references found at end of list; less used citations included within bracket

Terms as used in this study:

Battle: a hostile encounter or engagement between opposing military forces and/or native allies.

Skirmish: a minor engagement between small forces or between detachments from larger forces avoiding direct conflict between the main bodies of troops. Also, a minor or preliminary engagement, often on the periphery of an area of battle.

Massacre: the act or an instance of killing a number of usually helpless or compliant human beings, often under circumstances of atrocity or cruelty.

Invasion: a military offensive in which large parts of the armed forces of one geopolitical entity aggressively enter territory controlled by another such entity, generally with the objective of either conquering, liberating or re-establishing control or authority over a territory, forcing the partition of a country, altering the established government or gaining concessions from said government; gaining a decisive victory over the opposing forces or a combination thereof. During the War of 1812 an invasion was generally part of a larger strategy to gain a decisive victory.

Occupation - the holding and control of an area by a foreign military force.

Note: The information presented here is as accurate as possible but there are no guarantees about the accuracy because most of the dates and engagement descriptions are taken from other sources. As can be seen there is great discrepancy in dates for some actions. Some of these differences are due to typos, but others are based on differences of opinion and in some cases poor research or use of poorly researched sources.
