

REQUIESCAT IN PACE

THE WAR OF 1812 MAGAZINE

2006-2018

It is with regret that the Editorial Board announce that THE WAR OF 1812 MAGAZINE will cease after this final issue. This decision was taken because the editor was not receiving enough contributions of publishable quality to warrant continuing and also because members of the board have taken on additional activities which prevent them devoting the necessary time to the venture.

The first issue of the online WAR OF 1812 MAGAZINE was brought out by the Napoleon Series in January 2006 and to date, 27 issues have appeared. Throughout its life the guiding philosophy behind the MAGAZINE has always been objectivity and the editors -- for many years Professor Tanya Grodzinski of the Royal Military College of Canada and latterly Matthew MacVittie of the Seward House Museum in Auburn -- have striven to maintain objectivity and refrain from national bias. For that reason, the Editorial Board has always been evenly divided between American and Canadian historians.

All issues of the THE WAR OF 1812 MAGAZINE will continue to be available on the Napoleon Series. The Editorial Board have also agreed with Robert Burnham of the Series that should he receive a contribution relating to the war, they would be pleased to review it for him.

In closing, we want to thank Robert Burnham and the other staff of the Napoleon Series for the support and assistance they have rendered us during the last, very productive and busy, twelve years.
